MECOSTA — It was slime time at Mecosta Elementary on Tuesday evening.

Midwest School Shows, a Michigan-based school presentation company, presented the "Super U! Challenge" to a group of elementary students in an attempt to teach the children character building lessons while having fun.

"The whole show is revolved around building character," Brandy Lynn, owner of Midwest School Shows said. "It encourages the kids to be their own unique super hero."

The "Super U! Challenge" is presented in a kids game show format, with the group of children divided into a "red" and "blue" team. The two teams competed in competitions like the Instant Super Hero, the Trust Builders and Pass It On. Each game was meant to encourage trust, honesty, friendship and community. The show also addressed the very real problem of bullying among students.

"We're trying to get students to think about their character and actions, but present it in a way that is fun and entertaining" Brandy Lynn said. "Super U is all about being the best 'you' you can be."

The end of the show featured a slime game, with kids participating to see who could fill up the slime bucket, on top of their fellow students heads, the fastest.
